In January of 2005 the Speech-Language Pathology Program on the Campus of Armstrong Atlantic State University was awarded accreditation by the Council on Academic Accreditation (CAA) of the American Speech Language Hearing Association. This great program is aimed at training speech and language pathology students for careers in communicative disorders. Partnered with the Scottish Rite since 1999, this outstanding program receives funds through the Scottish Rite Foundation whose main thrust is providing support for the treatment of children with communication disorders, such as, aphasia, dyslexia and a number of other related language and learning problems.

Now known as the Rite Care Center for Communicative Disorders, the facility is located at Savannah Mall and is staffed by faculty and students of Armstrong Atlantic University. Many patients are treated and helped through the efforts and services provided. We invite you to visit the facility and should you know of a child that could possibly be helped by this wonderful cause, please let us get involved. The number to call for an appointment is 912-344-2969.

Qualified as a 501(c)(3) charitable organization exempt from federal and state income tax, the Scottish Rite Foundation welcomes your contributions to this very worthwhile cause of helping those less fortunate than ourselves.
